THE LOGAN - DUFFY TROPHY RIFLE MATCH

The relationship between the 101st Infantry and the 69th Infantry of the Army National Guard, and the origins of the LOGAN - DUFFY Rifle Match, began over a century ago, during the Civil War.

In July 1861, Colonel Michael Corcoran of the 69th Infantry, New York State Militia, rode out of Fort Corcoran, Arlington, Virginia, to visit neighboring Fort Cass. While there he paid his respects to Colonel Thomas Cass of the 9th Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry. The Fighting Irish of New York had met the Fighting Irish of Boston, and from this meeting was begun a regimental friendship that has endured for the past 108 years.

During the 75th anniversary celebration of the founding of the 101st Infantry (9th Massachusetts) Massachusetts National Guard in June 1936, Colonel Francis V. Logan of the 101st suggested to Colonel Alexander E. Anderson, Commanding Officer of the 165th Infantry (69th New York), New York National Guard that a regimental rifle team be formed by each organization for annual competition.

The purpose of the annual match was to encourage competitive marksmanship with the rifle, the principal weapon of the Infantry, and to enhance and develop the spirit of comraderie between the two military organizations of similiar background and heritage.

General Edward L. Logan, World War I commander of the 101st and Colonel Anderson of the 165th joined in donating a silver bowl which was designated the LOGAN - DUFFY Trophy. The bowl is of five gallon capacity, in fine vintage design, beautifully mounted and executed by Reed and Barton Silver-smiths of Taunton, Massachusetts, with a matching silver tray. The trophy was named for The Commanding Officers of the two regiments during the Spanish - American War, General Lawrence J. Logan of the 9th Massachusetts and General Edward Duffy of the 69th New York.

The ownership of the trophy is a joint proposition governed by a deed of trust drawn up by Colonel Francis V. Logan and Colonel Alexander E. Anderson in 1936, and states, in part, that although the trophy is owned jointly by the two organizations, actual possession shall be retained by the organization winning the annual rifle match.

The trophy, when it was first purchased, was estimated at a value of $400.00. In 1957 it was appraised at a value of $1900.00 and at present is worth nearly $4000.00

The first match for possession of the trophy was fired on 12 October 1936 at Camp Curtis Guild, Wakefield Massachusetts and was won by the 101st. Since it had been agreed, previously, that the locale would change each year the following year the 101st travelled to Camp Smith, Peekskill, New York with the 69th emerging the victor.

In the fall of 1940 both regiments were called to active duty and with the onset of World War II annual competition was impossible. The 101st, having won the match in 1939, the last year of pre-war competition, retained the trophy in Boston during these years.

In 1958 General Edward F. Logan and General William D. Lynch, then Colonels respectively of the 101st and the 165th (69th NY), reinstated the competition and on 11 October 1958 the first post-war match was fired at Camp Curtis Guild in Massachusetts with the 101st taking up where they left off nineteen years earlier and returning the trophy to Boston.

The match, usually well fired and fiercely competitive, has been an annual event ever since. The 69th made match history in 1968 by winning an unprecedented third consecutive year in a very close contest.

NEW YORK AND BOSTON IRISH SHOOT IT OUT

A friendship that began one hundred years ago is renewed this Saturday when New York's Fighting Sixty-Ninth and Boston's Irish Ninth Regiment compete in their annual rifle match for the Logan-Duffy Trophy.

The match will be held at Camp Smith, Peekskill, New York, on Saturday afternoon 14 October 1961. Following the rifle match, Colonel William D. Lynch will play host to the rifle teams in a victory dinner held at the Sixty-Ninth Regiment Armory at 68 Lexington Avenue in New York City.

The Trophy is named after the former Spanish American War Colonels of both Regiments, Brig-General Lawrence J. Logan of the Ninth Mass. and Brig-General Edward Duffy of the Sixty-Ninth. The Trophy is competed for annually, the first match was held in 1936 and was interrupted during the war years and was not revived till 1958. But the friendship between these two Irish Regiments with similar background and heritage goes back much further than 1936, in fact it began exactly one hundred years ago. In 1861, several weeks before the Battle of Bull Run, while the Sixty-Ninth New York was encamped near Arlington, Virginia, it's Commanding Officer, the celebrated Colonel Michael Corcoran rode over to pay his respects to Colonel Cass of the Ninth Mass. From this visit has begun a soldierly comradeship that has survived the ravages of time and change.

The present Commanding Officer of the Sixty-Ninth is Colonel William D. Lynch, a third generation member of the Regiment. Colonel Edward Logan of the Irish Ninth is the grandson of Brig-General Lawrence J. Logan of whom the trophy is named.

"NEW YORK IRISH TO SHOOT BOSTON IRISH"

On Saturday, October 10, 1959 the Fighting Irish of New York (Old 69th) 1st Battle Group, 165th Inf, will be host to the 1st Battle Group, 101st Inf, (Old 9th) of Boston. The Bostonians will travel to Camp Smith, Peekskill, N. Y. to determine possession of the Logan Duffy Trophy this year.

The rifle match will take place at Camp Smith, Peekskill, N. Y. on Saturday, October 10, 1959. In the event of inclement weather it will be held on Sunday, October 11, 1959.

The trophy is given to encourage marksmanship with the rifle, the principal weapon of the infantry and to engender a spirit of camaraderie between two military organizations of similar background and heritage.

General Edward L. Logan, World War I Commander of the 101st, together with General Alexander E. Anderson, then Commander of the Fighting Irish, donated a silver bowl to be known as the Logan-Duffy Trophy. This trophy was named for the Commanding Officers of the respective regiments during the Spanish American War, General Lawrence J. Logan of the 101st and General Edward Duffy of the Fighting Irish of New York.

October 12, 1936 marked the first meeting to shoot for the possession of the trophy at Camp Curtis Guild in Wakefield, Mass. and the match that year was won by the 101st Infantry Regiment. It was agreed, at that time, that the locale would change each year; therefore, in October of 1937 the 101st Team journeyed to Camp Smith, New York only to lose to the New Yorkers. The next year, 1938, at Wakefield, Mass. the "Fighting 69th" won again. But at Camp Smith, N. Y. in October of 1939 the Boston Regiment was victorious and brought the Logan-Duffy Trophy back to Boston where it remains to this date. In the fall of 1940 both the 165th Infantry and the 101st Infantry were called to active duty and thereafter the war years of World War II as well as the overseas campaigns of both Regiments precluded the possibility of the resumption of the rifle match.

In 1958 Colonel Edward F. Logan, Commanding Officer of the 101st Infantry Regiment, Mass ARNG and Colonel William D. Lynch, Commanding Officer of the 165th Infantry Regiment, NYNG, reinstated the competition, and on 11 October 1958 at Camp Curtis Guild, Wakefield, Mass. the 101st Infantry Rifle Team won the match and retained possession of the Trophy.

Following the rifle match, on Saturday evening, Col. William D. Lynch, Commanding Officer of the 165th Infantry Regiment, will play host to the rifle teams and staffs in a victory dinner to be held at the Armory, 23rd Street and Lexington Avenue.

THE LOGAN-DUFFY TROPHY RIFLE MATCH.

Though the Match was first fired in 1936, its origin goes back over a Century, to Civil War days. In July, 1861, Colonel Michael Corcoran of the Sixty-Ninth Regiment New York State Militia rode out of Fort Corcoran, Arlington, Virginia, to visit neighboring Fort Cass. It was there he paid his respects to Colonel Thomas Cass of the Ninth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry. The Fighting Irish of New York met the Fighting Irish of Boston and from this meeting was begun a Regimental friendship that has endured for the past One Hundred and Four Years.

During the Seventy-Fifth Anniversary celebrations of the founding of the 101st Infantry (Ninth Massachusetts) Mass. NG in June, 1936, Colonel Francis V. Logan of the Ninth suggested to Colonel Alexander E. Anderson, commanding the 165th Infantry (Sixty-Ninth N.Y.) N.Y.N.G. that a Regimental Rifle Team from each of these two Organizations meet each year in a Rifle competition.

The purpose of the Match was to encourage marksmanship with the Rifle, the principle weapon of the Infantry, and to engender a spirit of comaraderie between two Military Organizations of similar background and heritage.

During this planning stage General Edward L. Logan, World War I Commander of the Ninth, together with Colonel Anderson of the Sixty-Ninth, donated a silver bowl to be known as the Logan-Duffy Trophy. The silver bowl is of five gallon capacity in fine vintage design, beautifully mounted and executed by Reed and Barton Silversmiths, Taunton, Massachusetts, with a matching silver tray. The Trophy was named for the Commanding Officers of the respective Regiments during the Spanish-American War, General Lawrence J. Logan, of the Ninth Massachusetts, and General Edward Duffy, of the Sixty-Ninth New York.

The ownership of the Trophy is a joint proposition governed by a deed of trust drawn up by Colonel Francis V. Logan and Colonel Alexander E. Anderson in 1936 which states in part that although the Trophy is owned jointly by the two Regiments, actual possession shall be retained by the Regiment winning the annual rifle marksmanship competition.

The Trophy when first purchased was estimated at a value of $400.00. In 1957 it was appraised at a value of $1,900.00. At present it is valued at $2,500.00.

The first meeting to shoot for the possession of the Trophy was held on 12 October, 1936, at Camp Curtis Guild in Wakefield, Massachusetts. The Match that year was won by the Ninth, and it was agreed, at that time, that the locale would change each year. The following October, the Ninth team journeyed to Camp Smith, New York. In the fall of 1940 both Regiments were called to Active Duty and thereafter the War years of World War II as well as overseas campaigns of both Regiments precluded the possibility of the resumption of the Match. The Trophy remained in the possession of the Ninth for this period as they had won it in the 1939 Match.

In 1958 Colonel Edward F. Logan, Commanding Officer of the Ninth and Colonel William D. Lynch of the Sixty-Ninth, reinstated the competition, and on 11 October 1958 the first post-war Match was held at Camp Curtis Guild, Wakefield, Massachusetts. The Match has been held each year since.
